COLLECTIONS FOR THE YEAR.

An Increase Over Last Year of Over Six Millions Dollars.—The Service in a Generally Satisfactory Condition.—Other Disbursements from the National Capital.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The commissioner of internal revenue, Mr. Mason, has made his report to the secretary of the treasury on the operations of the internal revenue office for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889. The total collections for the fiscal year just ended were $130,893,432.53, and this sum has been duly accounted for and covered into the treasury. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1888, the total collections were $121,326,475.32, which compared with the collections for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1889, show an increase of $8,566,957.21.

The cost of collection for the fiscal year just ended will aggregate about $4,185,000 exclusive of the amount expended for the printing of internal revenue stamps, which is paid from the appropriation made to the bureau of engraving and printing and which will be shown in my annual report for this year. At this date it is impossible to state the exact amount of the cost of collection as some of the accounts belonging to the past fiscal year have not yet been received and the amount of such accounts has been estimated from the accounts of previous months, but when all are received and adjusted I do not think the total will vary much from the amount herein stated. The percentage of the cost of collection is a fraction less than 3.2 per cent, which is exactly the same as the percentage of cost for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1888.

Owing to the great number of distilleries in operation during the last fiscal year, and the increased quantity of spirits produced, resulting in an increase of the taxes collected from that source as compared with the receipts of the previous year, of more than $5,000,000, as shown in the accompanying statements, the expenditures for the salaries of stewards and the fees of gangers were largely in excess of the amount estimated when the appropriation was made therefor. The result was there was not funds enough to pay these officers in full for the month of June, 1889, and they have been paid up to the 8th ultimo only, leaving their accounts for the remainder of the month of June unpaid until an appropriation is made to cover this deficiency.

The amount of this deficiency is about $110,000 and has been included in the cost of collection, as shown stated, so that it appears that the increase in the cost of collection, as compared with the previous year, is in exact ratio with the increased collections. During the past fiscal year, examinations of the officers of the collectors of internal revenue have been made as frequent as was possible with the limited number of revenue agents at my command, and the reports of these examinations indicate a generally satisfactory condition of the service throughout the country.

Watched With Interest.

LONDON, July 30.—The investigation in New York in the case of the Murderer Kemmler, as to whether or not electricity can be relied upon to cause a prompt and painless death, is being watched with considerable interest on this side of the water. A correspondent of The Pall Mall Gazette writes to that paper to say that whatever doubts might exist in America, there is hardly room here to question the certainty of the results of electricity as scientifically applied. Killing, he says, by electricity has been reduced to absolute scientific certainty, by the experiments of Dr. R. W. Richardson in his model abattoir at Croydon.

Who Did It?

DUBLIN, July 30.—Major Sexton has received President Harrison's reply to the message of sympathy from the Dublin corporation for the Johnstown sufferers. The seal had been melted and the envelope refastened with another kind of gum, while the American crest was badly defaced.

A QUEER SEQUEL.

Mr. May Wilcox, of Minnesota, to Wed Henry Mylius, of Italy.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 30.—The announcement of the engagement of Ida May Wilcox, daughter of Charles Wilcox, of this city, to Henry J. Mylius, of Milan, Italy, has been made public. Mrs. Wilcox and her daughter sailed from Minneapolis yesterday for New York. The wedding is to occur in this city about the middle of October. Mr. Mylius is an Englishman by birth. He resided six years at Adrian, Minn., where he was a member of the banking firm of Mylius Brothers.

Mr. Wilcox admits all of these facts, but has little to say concerning his daughter's elopement in January last. The newspapers of Jan. 29 contained an account of the elopement in Paris of a Dr. Selson, of London, and Miss Ida Wilcox, 17, and pretty. They eloped from Nice, where the lady and her mother had been staying a month. The doctor had with him an 8-year-old son, and passed as an invalid in search of health. The young belle cashed a check from her father for $1,750, met Dr. Selson at Mentone, and with him fled to Paris, where both were arrested.

Dr. Selson protested that the girl was of age, and had come with him of her own accord. He refused to leave the doctor, and the entire party started back to Mentone by the next train. At the examination it was shown that the girl was over 16 years of age, and that, therefore, under the French law, Dr. Selson could not be held for her abduction. Moreover, it was established that Miss Wilcox had run away of her own free will. The accused English syndicate was thoroughly liberated, and this was the last of the affair that appeared in print.

A PRIEST ASSAULTED.

He is Hit on the Head With a Stone While Kneeling in Prayer.

PITTSBURGH, July 30.—Rev. Father Speiser, pastor of St. Philomena's German Catholic church at Fifteenth and Liberty streets, this city, was the victim of an outrageous assault while officiating at children's mass Monday morning. While kneeling in prayer at the beginning of mass, a strange man arose from his knees and half crept along the aisle toward the altar, carrying in his hand a stone, which he hurled about 500 paces, mostly children, had time to utter a word of warning, or even surmise the design, the man hurled the stone with all his force at the praying priest. The stone struck Father Speiser squarely on the head, inflicting two ugly gashes several inches in length on his scalp, from which the blood flowed in streams. The assault almost caused a panic, the children yelling and screaming at the top of their voices ran from the church. The assailant attempted to escape, but was captured and locked up. The wound on the priest's head is painful, but is not thought to be serious. The prisoner gave the name of J. Manning. Two hours after the assault he was sent to the work house for four months. He refused to give any account of himself.

All Five of the Accused Men are Again Brought Into Court.

CHICAGO, July 30.—The five men accused of complicity in the murder of Dr. Cronin—Coughlin, Beggs, Woodruff, Sullivan and Kunze—were arraigned in Judge Horton's court. All pleaded not guilty. In the case of Beggs, Coughlin, Woodruff and Kunze, a motion to quash the indictments was made and entered. Sullivan's attorneys made a motion for a change of venue from Judge Horton's court to Judge Hawes or any other court that might be selected.

At the request of State's Attorney Longenecker Judge Horton postponed his decision in regard to the granting of a change of venue to Sullivan until 10 o'clock to-morrow, when the motion to quash the indictments and Beggs' motion for an immediate trial will be argued.

English Syndicates.

Why They are Investing in Our Properties.

INVESTING IN REAL ESTATE.

The Continent of Europe Placing Its Wealth at London to be Used in Profitable Investments in America.—Why a Foreigner Failed to Buy Washington Real Estate.

WASHINGTON, July 30.—For some days past an Englishman, a member of one of the largest firms of solicitors in the city of London, has been the guest of a prominent Washington business man, who has made a fortune by dealing in real estate in this city during the last few years. The fact of the Englishman's arrival here was not chronicled in the society papers as is the general custom, and although he has explored the city pretty thoroughly in a carriage, on horseback and on foot, he has made few acquaintances.

The object of the Englishman's visit here, however, leaked out in a roundabout way, and with it some information which may be of importance to financial and commercial communities. The Englishman is a real estate lawyer, and well up in matters relating to transfer of property. He came here as the representative of an English syndicate which is prepared to invest several millions in Washington real estate. His investigations convinced him that there is money to be made out of real estate in this city, and that he was preparing to make definite offers when he discovered that his own countrymen were already engaged in buying the world's fair site in the District of Columbia and the territories except a foreign government purchasing property to be used as a national or other governmental purpose.

This, of course, knocked the scheme in the head for the time being. The Englishman's last had a pardonable curiosity to know why the English were buying up every thing in this country, on which they can lay their hands, and he asked him how it was that there was so much capital lying idle in Great Britain. His visitor frankly said all these investments were not being made with British capital alone, but the entire continent of Europe was sending money to London to be invested in the United States. The money goes to London because that city is naturally the great financial center of the world. But France, Germany, Italy and, in fact, the entire continent, is interested in the negotiations now pending in various parts of the country for the purchase of industrial concerns.

In the course of conversation the Washingtonian said he was surprised that Europe had so much surplus capital seeking investment, as according to the impression he had derived from reading reports of trade in Europe during the last two years there was no great institutions had been making a very great amount of money. And a great many of them he believed had been compelled to run on short time at a narrow margin of profit. The Englishman admitted the truth of the remark and went on to explain that Great Britain and the rest of continental Europe believed that it was only a question of time before all Europe would be involved in the greatest war the world has ever seen, and to provide for the probable rainy day money had been withdrawn from home investments so that it could be invested in this country.

The marvelous recuperation shown by this country since the civil war, and the way it had weathered domestic troubles, had convinced leading financiers of Europe of the stability of the American form of government and institutions, and they felt convinced that money invested here would yield a handsome return and the capital be perfectly safe. Another reason for seeking investment here is that in case of war the United States will alone profit by it, and in proportion as the trade of the rest of the world suffered, America would be the gainer. Consequently European investors in American enterprises will be gamblers, and a part of the enhanced prices which they would have to pay for the necessities of life which would follow the declaration of war would come back to them in the shape of profits from their American enterprises.

No Danger of a Printer Strike.

A DUAL LIFE.

The Recent Johnstown Flood Recalls a Startling Sensation.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 30.—One of the most startling sensations just brought to light by the recent flood is the fact that W. H. Overbeck, a prominent man and resident of this place for ten years; married here and was the father of several children, had a wife living in Philadelphia. He was well liked by everybody, and held a prominent position with the Cambria Iron company. His wife was of a respectable family, and no one suspected that he had been living a dual life.

Such, however, was the case, as the Philadelphia woman has fully established her identity, and in addition she has three children born to Mr. Overbeck before he left her. Just how he managed to keep his Philadelphia wife away from her is not known, but he regularly sent her $20 a month for her wages. The case will likely now be taken into the court on account of Mr. Overbeck's insurance money, as his family here survived him.

Rolling Mill Now Striked.

PORTSMOUTH, Pa., July 30.—The 600 employees of the Fishback rolling mill of the Pottsville Iron and Steel company have struck for $3.75 per ton for puddlers instead of $3.25, and for a corresponding advance in other departments. New York—Money at 6 1/2 per cent. Currency rates, 118 bid; four coupons, 120 1/2; four-and-a-halfs, 100 1/2 bid. The stock market this morning was intensely dull and the amount of business done in the first hour was in all probability the smallest at that time of the day for over a year. The opening prices were generally slightly higher than Saturday's closing figures, but there was no life in the market and the subsequent dealings were outside and devoid of feature in the general list. At 11 o'clock the market was dull and rather heavy about opening prices. The market remained about the same level as to prices after 11 o'clock, while the dullness if anything increased as usual. At noon the market was intensely dull and slowly at about opening prices.

Neal Dow's War on Smoking.

Gen. Dow is strongly opposed to the use of tobacco, and has carried on a life-long crusade against it. He always has claimed that tobacco dulls the moral sense. Many years ago, before there were any railroads, a man traveling in a stage coach with Dow one day lighted a cigar.

"I wish you would stop smoking, sir," said Dow.

"Is smoking often as bad to you?" the man asked.

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I'll stop as soon as I've finished this cigar."

Without another word, Dow suddenly reached forward, pulled the cigar from the man's lips and threw it into the road.

The man tried up, but looked at the well-known figure of his fellow passenger, regarded the bright light in his eyes and exhaled.

"I recall an incident coming down the river, while I was traveling in Europe," said the general. European railroads did not provide a parlor smoking car then, and I don't know as they do now. A passenger in our car was completely smoking his cigar.

"You're an Englishman, sir, aren't you?" I said to him.

"Oh, no," said he briskly. "I'm an American."

"What you an American and smoking in the presence of ladies?"

"He stopped smoking, but with poor grace, and he looked as if he would like to tell me."

"He was of a different type from a man whom I met on a steamer in the English channel. I asked him to stop smoking, and he did so with profuse apologies. I told him that I believed that tobacco dulls the moral sense, but he smiled at the idea."

"You furnish a proof of my theory, sir, said I. 'You were smoking when you ought not to have been, and you acknowledged it as soon as I called your attention to it. Tobacco dulls your moral sense.'"—Lewiston Journal.

About Coffee.

The pleasure of coffee is by no means dissipated in the warm weather, when "hot coffee" is not needed as a means of defying the discomfort of cold weather. Cold coffee is a delicious beverage when well made. Coffee is made of strong coffee from a freezer, and served in cups with whipped cream, is a dainty dessert or a convenient part of the afternoon tea menu. Coffee is a peculiar summer drink, and few people accustomed to the morning cup of coffee make any difference on account of the weather in this most important feature of the breakfast table. An expert in coffee maintains that the best coffee is made in the old-fashioned tin coffee pot. "Don't give me any new patent arrangement for making coffee," he says, "the old tin pot is the only kind of cooking utensil that preserves the aroma and the full flavor of the coffee."

After the coffee has been boiled and settled in it is good strength up in a cup half filled with cream and hot milk. Most true coffee epurates have a better prepared with full strength that will give a delicious aroma and a true but delicate flavor to a cup of rich cream and boiled milk. Rather peculiarly the average American drunk about the same amount of coffee now that he did eighteen years ago. In 1870 the average consumption for each person was seven and one-half pounds, in 1887 it was seven and two-thirds pounds, showing that the taste for coffee in this country is not decreasing.

Children's Dress.

Some mothers affect a very odd style in dressing their babies and little children, and they look quaint and a trifle like a sweet face and frazzled hair that from old time linen dresses. I saw a little girl of about 4 years of age yesterday in the house of a friend. She had a little short wavy dress of white muslin, with a white downy just under her arms. The skirt had three deep tucks, and it reached her ankles. She had on madge-top slippers with silver buckles. The shoes were short and light with little daisy-like bows. And she wore a cunning little close cap of muslin.

The whole outfit could not have cost three dollars, but there wasn't a person, not even a cooing a grumpy looking old man, who didn't smile at that precious little baby sitting there so demurely and sweetly in her own quaint beauty.

It doesn't require a lot of love and skill to make children lovely. Dress your little ones contentedly and simply, but keep them clean and neat and healthy, and I am happy to say that it is the fashion now to do just these things.—Fashion Letter.

The Sign of Modern France.

It is useless to relate the oft-told tale of the capture of the Bastille. Suffice it to say that it was sufficient notice to the monarchs of Europe that the old regime was at an end. The common people of France had suffered a great wrong. The monarchs had refused to fire on the common people. Two monuments were erected to all thinking men that the old feudal regime was a great evil.

THE LIME KILN CLUB. An Impostor Discovered—Mrs. Gordon's Gives Some Good Advice. The secretary announced the following communication from Boston: Brother and Sister, President Lime Kiln Club, De- troit, Mich.: Respectfully—An individual called on me dur- ing the present week representing himself to be Waydown Bebe, a member of your club, and re- questing subscriptions for a building to be used as a woman's branch of the Lime Kiln Club. My suspicions were aroused that he was a person trading on the reputation of your re- spected club, as his appearance did not justify me in the belief that he was fresh from your edifying influence. I refused to give him any contribution, and wrote to you in order that I may ascertain how to distinguish impostors from real representatives of your club, as I should be sorry to allow one of your people to go without some encouragement.

Will you kindly inform me and the public in general through the usual channel of such means as you may deem necessary for us to distinguish real members of your club, and oblige yours truly, Mrs. Gordon.

"De thanks of this club am due to Mr. Johnson for his constancy in holding 'on' on dat person," said the president. "Dat man was a base impostor. Waydown Bebe, as you all know, has not bin out of Detroit in five years, and de Lawd only knows when he will git money 'nuff to make oben a twenty mile trip. De public am hereby informed dat we do not contemplate a woman's branch of dis club, nor any older radical changes.
We give no prizes an' employ no trabbles agents. When a member of dis club is go-standin' sots out to trabble he ar' furnished with a certificate of identity, on de left hand corner of which will be found his signature an' fotage. None genuine widout it."

Judge Asphal Green arose to a question of privilege. Time after time he had listened to communications in which the colored race was referred to as "coons," and none of the members had been moved to object. He could hardly pick up a newspaper without seeing the same reference, and more than once he had heard the expression used on the street and in shops. He didn't want to be captious, he said, but such things pained him. He hoped the club, as a club, would take some decided action to express its deep displeasure.

"Brudder Green, would you object to being called a fox?" queried the president.
"I reckon not, sah."

"Well, dar an' no great difference between de fox an' de coon—not 'nuff to kick about.
It's jist a habit darin' white men hev got into, dat's all. Day would call you a fox or 'possum or coon, jist as quick, but dey dun dum' think quick 'nuff. I'll spole to you about it an' you can call you a coon or a mule, if dat will relieve your mind."

"But, sah, do you uphold sich conduct?"

"Nix."

"Wasn't he a hunter or a poet, or some-

ABOUT THE WHITE HOUSE. IT IS NOW IN THE HANDS OF DECORATORS AND MECHANICS. There seems to be no end to the Amount of Money That May Be Spent on the Old Domestic Which Has Already Swallowed Up $2,000,000 and More.

[Special Correspondence.]
WASHINGTON, July 29.—The White House is again in the hands of the decorators and mechanics. There seems to be no end to the money this old house is capable of swallowing up in repairs and new furnishings. Probably the majority of readers will be surprised to learn that the government has up to date spent more than two millions of dollars on the executive mansion, but this is the fact.
When the house was first begun the people called it a palace, and such it may have appeared to them in that day of simplicity.
The government has never been lavish in its expenditures on the mansion, and during the last twenty or thirty years there has not been a time in which somebody has not criticized the house as a disgrace to the nation.
It certainly has never been much of a palace, though it has swallowed up two millions of dollars since it was built, a little less than a century ago. Now Marshal Wilson has prepared a plan for enlarging the structure, which, heaven knows, is needed badly enough.
This is the first official recognition of the demand there is and long has been for a new executive mansion, and there has been up to date the matter will now be taken up by congress and pushed through. A great deal of sentiment and many historic memories cling about the old house, and of course there would be a general protest against the demolition of the structure. Happily that is not necessary. It can be enlarged without greatly marring its beauty, and with more convenient quarters for the family of the president and a stronger line of demarcation between the private and public parts of the house, the old structure might be made to do very well for another century or two.

One great trouble with the house as it now stands is the mixing of the public and private uses. The visitor who is granted the favor of a look through the house under the escort of old Pendell realizes this at every step. After leaving the lobby and the big East room you are all the time in the residence of the president and his family. None of the members of the family are to be seen, but you can't get the impression out of your mind that you are intruding upon the privacy of an American gentleman's household, and you would not be surprised at any moment to come suddenly upon the president napping on a lounge with his coat and shoes off, and a newspaper slipped over his face to keep the flies away, or upon Mrs. Harrison trying in true grandmotherly fashion to tell little Benjamin into an afternoon nap.

This unpleasant impression is heightened by the actions of old Pendell. As he leads you about he seems to go on tiptoe lest he disturb somebody, and when he speaks it is in adulterate, almost timid tones. When he opens the door leading from the state dining room to the corridor in the family end of the house he fairly gives one a chill. Cautiously opening the door an inch or two he peers through the narrow opening like a boy who after contraband jam in a forbidden pantry.
Not till he has satisfied himself no member of the family is present does he venture to open the door for your passage. "I wish I were out of this," the visitor involuntarily exclaims to himself; "I don't like this kind of spying, and I wish to go to room in a gentleman's house, and I don't know how his family like a kitchen maid's lover. It is a shame that we should be compelled to do this in the house of the president of the United States."

Without doubt old Pendell thinks in the same way. But he has been spying around so long that he doesn't mind it any more.
Pendell has been in the White House about a quarter of a century, and it is worth a good deal to hear him describe the furniture of the mansion and to hear him say, in a sort of guide book voice, "On this spot Mr. and Mrs.
Cleveland were married," or, in the East room, "Right here, facing like this, Nettie Grant was married to Mr. Bartok." "On this very spot," continues the guide, "Mr.
Lincoln stood and gave me some parting directions about the luncheon he was to have after coming back from the theatre the night he went to the play house and was shot.
Poor man! that luncheon was never ate.
Right here, Gen. Garfield stood on the balcony when he was going away with Secretary Blaine and shook his hand as he said good-by. An hour later they brought him back from the railway station fatally wounded." Pendell's sense of locality must be strong, for there is not a spot in the White House that does not have some such association in his mind. And his memory concerning articles of furniture, lamps, shades, pictures and articles of lacquer is prodigious. He remembers by what piece of furniture or president's wife everything in the house is reached. Mrs. Cleveland selected this vase and that lamp, and Mr.
Arthur this picture and that carpet. As the faithful and intelligent servant runs over the long catalogue which he knows so well it seems to the listener that President Arthur must have done a great deal for the White House.

There is not much in the house that is pretty and artistic that was not bought by Mr. Arthur, and everything that Arthur bought is pretty and in the best of taste. He was the first modern president who had the taste of making the White House a home, and who was familiar with the values of color tones in paper and decorations. When Arthur came in the old colors of dead green, blue and red, a little faded, but still strong enough to give offense to an artistic sense, gave way to the rich Pompeian shades which now adorn the Red room, to the robin's egg blue and silver which are a delight to the eye in the Blue room, and to the Nile green and gold which make the Green room so artistic. As an evidence of Arthur's knack of rearranging things, the fact of the old extension dining table, off which presidents to the number of nearly a score had eaten, may be cited. It was a miserable excuse for a state dining table, and Arthur had it taken out, but not scrapped. Pendell now shows visitors a really handsome sideboard and a convenient, small dining table made out of the effect ma-hogony under which John Adams was the first president to stretch his legs.

Pendell stops his visitors in the Green room and remarks, in a tone that is impressive because almost apocryphal, "There are the portraits of two former mistresses of this house who have just died within a few days of each other, Mrs. Hayes and Mrs. Tyler. The two portraits hang facing each other, and the victims of headstrong, lawless American women they are. Since Mrs. Hayes' death it has been made more than ever apparent that she was one of the most popular mistresses the White House ever had. Said an employe of the house: 'Mrs. Hayes was the most lovable woman I ever knew. She was a mother to all the young men employed here. It came just as natural to her as breathing. On Thanksgiving she used to set an old fashioned country dinner in the state dining room to which we were all invited with our wives and children.'

LONG LIFE
There is nothing in the world more generally desired than long life, yet the majority of people put off caring for their health, not because they are really careless, but because so few of us live at such a pace we have not time to give the subject sufficient thought until we receive a reminder in the shape of a severe illness.

Then, too, we are constantly bewildered by the various schools of medicine, and the physicians who represent them, and often blunder in our choice of a doctor.

If people only knew that the very best health-keeper, life-proserver, and disease-preventer that has yet been discovered, is contained down into a concentrated and very palatable form in the shape of New Style Pleasant Taste Vinegar Bitters, they would not hesitate a moment to try it.

But they do not know. How can they know, when so many not only worthless, but positively injurious drugs are constantly flooding the market under various names, such as the New Style Vinegar Bitters, as bad as any of them?

They do not know, of course, unless they have the courage to try the New Style. It straightens out a tangled-up system in a few short while, and those who are once cured, are cured for good.

Why don't you try it, then? It is sent out by a responsible house, and is exactly as represented. It costs but a dollar for a very large bottle. Try it once and you will never be so glad of anything in your life. You don't just may not like it, but he will order it for you. Be sure it says New Style Pleasant Taste on the label, and you will be happier than if you had found a gold mine, for it really is a mine of health.

—The Supreme court of Ohio has struck a blow at the "instalment plan," of robbing the poor. Sales of sewing machines, organs and numerous other articles have heretofore been made, on the instalment plan, where the articles were taken back by the sellers, if payments were not all made, but none of the money the purchaser had paid, refunded to them. The court has decided that in cases where any article is taken by the seller, all money that has been paid must be returned to the purchaser except a sufficient amount to pay for all wear and use of the article. This is a wise decision and will cure a growing evil.

A Moderate Snake Story.

[Delaware Gazette.]

T. C. Schneck and a companion were out in the woods squirrel hunting; happening to pass under a very tall tree, their attention was attracted to a buzzing sound, and on looking up they discovered an immense swarm of bees angrily flying around a hole some thirty feet up in the tree. The bees seemed very much excited and angry, and evidently fighting some foe that had gotten into the tree. Mr. Schneck and companion patiently waited and closely watched the hole in the tree, and their patience was soon rewarded by seeing the heads of two large snakes protrude from the hole, followed by their slimy bodies. As soon as they had gotten out of the hole they were shot by Mr. Schneck and upon being measured were found to be over five feet in length each. They were yellow bellied black snakes, and seemed to have thrived on their sweet feast. The snakes had evidently discovered the honey in the tree, and had determined to rob the nest, which they were successfully doing, when discovered by Mr. Schneck.

ANOTHER RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

James Mettiff is Struck by a C. H. V. and T. Passenger Train and Probably Fatally Injured.

Another frightful accident occurred on the C. H. V. and T. at the stone quarries this morning. As James Mettiff was walking along the main track and when almost opposite the Evans stone crusher, he was struck by the north-bound passenger train, due in this city about 6 o'clock.

The noise created by the stone crusher was sufficient to drown the sound of the oncoming train, and its approach was not noticed until the unfortunate man was struck by the engine and hurled from the track. He was thrown a distance of fifteen feet into the quarry, where he fell apparently lifeless onto the bed of rock. The train was stopped and he was immediately carried to the home of Albert Morrison, by whom he is employed as a farm and quarry hand.

Drs. Sweeney and Bin were called and an examination of his injuries made. His right arm and leg were found to be broken, his right shoulder badly bruised and his right side badly injured, with perhaps internal injuries, and his head has a deep gash cut into it, caused, it is thought, by falling upon the sharp edge of a stone. These injuries were attended to and everything made as comfortable as possible.

Upon inquiry it was learned that he was about 26 years of age, and is supposed to have a wife in one of the asylums at Columbus. He has been employed in this vicinity for some time.

No blame can be attached to the engineer or train crew, as everything possible was done to attract his attention and warn him off the track.

C. H. V. and T. Goods.

Referring to the condition of the Columbus, Hocking Valley and Toledo Railroad, the New York Times says: "Hocking Valley has now the pleasure, or otherwise, of seeing his famous $8,000,000 issue of Hocking Valley bonds defaulted on."

Slave of that company made a public statement yesterday of the condition of the property, the loss of business it had suffered, the worst losses that were to come, and with a frankness as creditable to him as it is rare in Wall street, announced that on September 1st, when the interest on the Burke bonds becomes due, it would be necessary to put the road into the hands of a receiver. It will be remembered that the company never received a penny from the sale of these bonds. It all went into the pockets of the consolidators. They proved their technical legal right to it, but that did not help the company. Both the stock and bonds of the road have been dropping for some time past, and President Shaw's announcement was scarcely a surprise. Of course a thing like this hurts the market more or less, and it seems to be in a condition for the moment where it is very sensitive to bad news. Some stocks have got down to a level where further hammering does not depress them, but there are some other prominent ones which have not. They have been supported by cliques who are being forced to unload, and there is the fear ahead of tightening of the money market. Secretary Windom says he sees no sign of money working closely, indicating that he means close enough to worry the mercantile community; but it may work close enough to give the bull pools in Wall street some trouble.

Hay and Straw Dealers' Association.

Forty of the hay and straw packers and shippers met at the Hotel Marion in this city, Monday, and organized the Ohio Hay and Straw Dealers' association.

The meeting was held in response to a call from C. Hatcher, of Tiffin, for the purpose of putting the business on a paying basis. The meeting was enthusiastic and showed a spirit of determination to endeavor to correct the now existing abuses.

Mr. Willis Hultock, founder of the New York state organization, was present and gave a history of the hay trade and the practical results of New York organization.

"The members state that their object is not to monopolize, but to regulate the business so that all can be benefited, from producer to consumer."

A Good Wheat Crop.

Wm. Klingbe, of Richland township, Marion county, O., raised on B. Waelder's farm, nine and three-fourths acres of Falls wheat, from which he threshed 401 bushels, machine measure, which makes by weight forty-three bushels to the acre. Any one having any doubts about this yield can satisfy themselves by calling at any house and I will help them measure the ground and wheat. The ground that this wheat was raised on is of a black, sandy soil and well tilled and manured. B. WAEDER.

The Andrews Opera Company.

"The comic opera, 'Erminie,' given by the Andrews Opera company, in the Arcade of Music, Saturday evening, was even better than had been expected, notwithstanding that this famous company was well and favorably known in our city. The singers did splendidly and were frequently greeted with encores. The company is very strong in this opera, having a cast peculiarly adapted to this opera. Many selections from grand opera were introduced, the rendition of which show the company to be equal to any opera company on the road. They are favorites in Madison and can count on a full house whenever they may choose to return."

The above is taken from the Madison (Wis.) Democrat. This company will appear at Music Hall on Wednesday evening, July 31st, on which occasion the music lovers of Marion will have an opportunity to witness a magnificent rendition of "Erminie," the gem of comic operas.
